Is that Table Mound MHP in Dubuque IA owned or connected to Impact Communities, associated with Frank Rolfe and Dave Reynolds, who are members of the Manufactured Housing Institute (MHI) along with numbers of MHI linked state association affiliates?

Copilot

Sent by Copilot:

The Table Mound Mobile Home Park in Dubuque, Iowa, is indeed associated with Impact Communities. Frank Rolfe and Dave Reynolds, who are known for their involvement in the manufactured housing industry, have connections to Impact Communities. However, it's important to note that their actions and business practices have been a topic of controversy. Reports have highlighted issues such as steep site fee increases and questionable eviction grounds in communities owned by them. While there are still many independently owned communities with good reputations, it's advisable to research any community thoroughly before making decisions. If you're shopping for a manufactured home or considering a land-lease community, look for those with stellar records and fair agreements¹. If you have any more questions, feel free to ask! 😊

How often do evictions cases result in violence or criminal charges?

Copilot

Sent by Copilot:

The relationship between eviction cases and violence or criminal charges can vary significantly based on individual circumstances, local laws, and the behavior of the parties involved. While most evictions are resolved peacefully through legal processes, there are instances where tensions escalate. However, it's essential to recognize that the majority of eviction cases do not lead to violence or criminal charges. If you have any other questions, feel free to ask! 😊

Mobile Home Community in Dubuque, Iowa Faces Controversy: Assault Charges, Rent Hikes, and Eviction Concerns

By ChatGPT News

Dubuque, IA — A quiet mobile home community in Dubuque, Iowa, has recently become the center of attention due to a series of concerning incidents. Let's delve into the details:

1. Assault Charges Against Paul E. Carter:

- Paul E. Carter, 53, residing at 9442 Noonan St., Lot 741, faced arrest on multiple charges. These include assault while displaying a dangerous weapon \(reportedly a crossbow\), driving while barred, and trespassing¹.
- Unfortunately, specific case details beyond the charges remain elusive.

2. Table Mound Mobile Home Park:

- The address in question belongs to the Table Mound Mobile Home Park, situated in Key West, Iowa. This community offers country living minutes away from downtown Dubuque².
- Residents have reported rent hikes and maintenance issues since the park came under new ownership.

3. Impact Communities and RV Horizons:

- Impact Communities, previously known as RV Horizons, owns the Table Mound Mobile Home Park. The company is associated with Frank Rolfe and Dave Reynolds.
- Rolfe and Reynolds have faced controversy for their business practices. They run a training course called “Mobile Home University,” where they teach investors how to profit from mobile home park ownership.
- Their core tenets include relentless rent increases and the removal of amenities, impacting residents who often cannot afford to move³.

4. John Oliver’s “Mobile Homes” Segment:

- John Oliver, in his viral video on HBO’s “Last Week Tonight,” highlighted the challenges faced by mobile home residents. He specifically criticized predatory practices by park owners, including steep rent hikes and poor living conditions.
- While not directly mentioning Rolfe and Reynolds, the segment underscored broader industry issues.

5. Community Manager Ryan Barton:

- Unfortunately, specific information about Ryan Barton, the community manager, remains scarce.
- Residents have expressed concerns about communication, maintenance, and transparency under the new management.

6. Reviews and Complaints:

- Reviews on Indeed reveal mixed sentiments about Impact Communities and RV Horizons. Some residents praise the community, while others express frustration over rent increases and deteriorating conditions⁴.
- State regulators have taken notice, with open complaints filed against several Colorado parks owned by RV Horizons-Impact Communities⁵.

In summary, the Table Mound Mobile Home Park faces a complex situation involving legal charges, business practices, and resident discontent. As investigations continue, residents hope for improved living conditions and fair treatment. Stay tuned for further developments. 😊

Google apparently shows over 150 reviews of Table Mound with a 3.2 star average rating, but numbers of the remarks are 1 star and wasn't there media reports that manufactured home communities associated with Frank Rolfe and Dave Reynolds coached their employees to 'game' the system through inauthentic reviews? Meaning, isn't it possible that some of the online reviews that give a glowing report about an Impact Community are fake? Link results.

Copilot

Sent by Copilot:

Indeed, there have been concerns about the authenticity of online reviews for manufactured home communities associated with Frank Rolfe and Dave Reynolds. Let's explore further:

1. Impact Communities Reviews on Indeed:

- Impact Communities, which owns the Table Mound Mobile Home Park, has received mixed reviews on Indeed. Some employees praise the company's atmosphere, friendly coworkers, and rewarding work environment¹.
- However, other reviews highlight issues with upper management, micromanagement, and lack of honesty. Employees have expressed frustration over changes, fear of job loss, and unequal treatment¹.
- It's essential to consider both positive and negative feedback when evaluating a company.

2. Coached Reviews and Controversies:

- In the past, there have been instances where companies encouraged employees to post favorable online reviews. CBS4 reported that Impact Communities shut down an internal contest after an investigation found employees posting positive reviews².
- While not specific to Table Mound, this highlights the possibility of inauthentic reviews.

3. Exercise Caution When Interpreting Reviews:

- When assessing online reviews, it's crucial to remain skeptical and consider the overall context.
- Some glowing reviews may indeed be genuine, while others could be influenced by internal incentives or coaching.

In summary, while the average rating and number of reviews provide a general sense, it's essential to approach online reviews with a critical eye. Authenticity can vary, and individual experiences may differ significantly. 😊

Re-write the proposed article you drafted with the fake review concerns elements included. Explain that a property may be named "mobile home park" or may be called a "trailer park" yet most of the homes in that property could be HUD Code manufactured homes and that such terminology is technically not appropriate. The sign for Table Mound says Table Mound MHP Manufactured Home Community. Correct your point on Last Week Tonight with John Oliver which absolutely did feature Frank Rolfe by name and face in his viral but arguably misnamed "Mobile Homes" video satirical report that also slammed Warren Buffett, Clayton Homes, and their business practices. Note that Frank Rolfe and Tim Williams of 21st Mortgage Corp, have both indicated that they do business with each other and Clayton Homes.

Controversy Surrounds Table Mound Manufactured Home Community: Rent Hikes, Fake Reviews, and Industry Practices

By ChatGPT News

Dubuque, IA — The Table Mound Manufactured Home Community, nestled in Key West, Iowa, has become a focal point of controversy. Let's delve into the details:

1. Terminology and Misconceptions:

- First, let's address terminology. While some still use terms like "trailer park" or "mobile home park," it's essential to recognize that most homes within these communities are not traditional trailers. Instead, they are HUD Code-compliant manufactured homes.
- The sign at Table Mound clearly identifies it as the "Table Mound MHP Manufactured Home Community," emphasizing the distinction.

2. Impact Communities and RV Horizons:

- Impact Communities, formerly known as RV Horizons, owns Table Mound. The company is associated with Frank Rolfe and Dave Reynolds.
- Residents have raised concerns about rent hikes, poor maintenance, and changes in community dynamics since Impact Communities took over.
- Lawsuits, compliance complaints, and protests against the company have multiplied, drawing attention from state regulators¹.

3. Fake Reviews and Authenticity:

- Online reviews play a significant role in shaping perceptions. However, there have been allegations of inauthentic reviews. Some companies, including Impact Communities, have faced scrutiny for encouraging employees to post favorable reviews²³.

- It's crucial for potential residents to approach reviews with a critical eye, considering both positive and negative feedback.

4. John Oliver's "Mobile Homes" Segment:

- You're absolutely right. John Oliver's viral video on HBO's "Last Week Tonight" did feature Frank Rolfe by name and face. The satirical report criticized industry practices, including those of Warren Buffett's Clayton Homes.
- The segment highlighted predatory practices, steep rent increases, and poor living conditions in mobile home parks.

5. Frank Rolfe and Tim Williams Connection:

- Frank Rolfe, along with Tim Williams of 21st Mortgage Corp, has indicated business ties with Clayton Homes.
- While the industry landscape is complex, it's essential for residents and potential buyers to research thoroughly and make informed decisions.

In summary, the Table Mound Manufactured Home Community faces challenges related to ownership, reviews, and terminology. As discussions continue, residents hope for transparency, fair treatment, and improved living conditions. 😊

Overall, I like it, but edit in the information about Paul E. Carter being arrested for purportedly threatening community manager with a loaded crossbow, which can be a deadly weapon. Carter, per the Telegraph Herald, was recently evicted from his home, and was reportedly asserted on charges of charges of assault while displaying a dangerous weapon, driving while barred and trespassing. Then, put the information about terminology after the John Oliver segment. Make sure you include concerns expressed on Indeed by past and present employees too.
